My name is Chacha, I'm 10 years old and I'm really bored. It's Sunday and it's lunchtime at grandma's house, full of adults. By the way, it's amazing what adults can eat, it never ends! It's not a lunch, it's all day! Anyway, I was lying on the bed staring at the ugly carpet on the floor and then, bang, a flash of genius: I'm going to write a comic! My own comic. I'm really good at drawing and I love telling stories, so would you like to read one?

Fleur is going through a rough time: a job she hates, friends she's not sure she can count on, invasive parents, a low love life... and a little cat who spends his time making mischief in the apartment. Her little voice is telling her that she needs to get her act together and question certain aspects of her life... Like eating healthier, exercising... In short, she should take care of her body and her mind. But Fleur doesn't listen. So Line, her little voice, suddenly appears. In her kitchen. And with a single mission: Fleur has to take charge of her life and become the person she has always wanted to be. Needless to say that it's going to be challenging.

Four 6th graders, Matthieu, Inès, Margot and Jules, discover how to enter other people's nightmares and rescue them. In the middle of the night, with Margot's cat as their guide, they pass through a mysterious door and enter the most terrible imaginary worlds... An enchanting garden transformed into an inextricable jungle? A horde of menacing mice invading a bedroom? Giant hands throwing you down a well? There must be a logic behind these mysteries... They're often tempted to turn back, but they all swear, as members of the Nightmares Hunters, to help any tormented sleeper who asks... A part thriller, part investigation series, featuring characters that must also deal with their own fears, tackling real-life issues through the prism of fantasy and the unconscious.

Milo is a lively little boy who lives in a house by a lake. His father is away a lot, but Milo can count on 3 old aunts with undeniable culinary talents and, above all, a lot of curiosity! So much that Milo can't hide what he's found in the lake: a magnificent golden fish, which is getting bigger by the minute. And after the fish, he sees a man with a toad's head, and another with an eagle's head, prowling around the house... Then the golden fish, now a giant, drags Milo to the bottom of the lake... When he wakes up, he discovers a completely different world, a village where humans are feared and the battle between good and evil rages on!

JUST LIKE IN HARRY POTTER,
CHILDREN ARE THE DRIVING FORCE OF THE STORY.

Welcome to the orphanage of Argentan, and its numerous mysteries. Sent there after her adventurer father goes missing, Lise, a courageous and resourceful teenager is trained in the demanding art of lace-making. She soon gets caught in the building's unsettling atmosphere, where nothing is quite as it seems... Is it that nagging feeling of being watched? Or Tom's sudden adoption by a wealthy but mysterious countess? Not to mention the strange silk used for the dress Lise is working on. It's shiny, strong and soft, but grey like a spider's web... Several intrigues follow their course before coming together for a spectacular finale.

Seven naturally gifted children from around the world are pulled by a strange force. Responding to the call, they each discover gigantic creatures and witness their awakenings. Through their contact with these giants, the children understand that their gifts are linked to the creatures and that their awakening is not a coincidence. Somewhere on earth, a destructive giant has also come out of his long sleep and is threatening Earth's natural balance, while a greedy man tries to manipulate the children and their giants. In this ecological saga, children and giants join forces to protect their world.

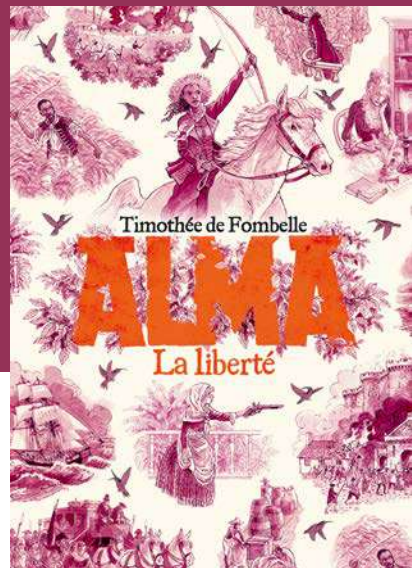

A best-selling series that addresses the themes of ecology and fraternity and portrays very diverse children coming from all around the world.

West Africa, 1786. Alma has always lived happily with her two brothers and their parents in a remote valley, near the Guinea Gulf. Until the day she wakes up and realizes that her little brother Lam, for whom she made up fabulous stories about the world beyond, is gone. Alma heads out after him, as does her father Mosi few hours later, leaving Nao, the mother, alone at home with the elder, Soum.

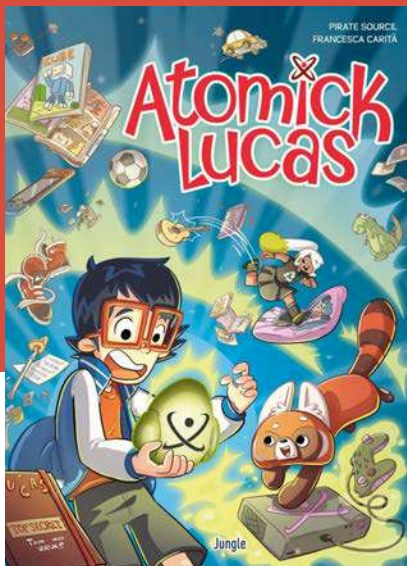

Thinking that her little brother is aboard, Alma secretly climbs onto Sweet Amélie, a slaver ship under the command of the cruel Captain Gardel. Joseph, a young orphan in search of a treasure who has also climbed aboard in La Rochelle a few months earlier, finds her. They team up, and their adventures will bring them to the Caribbean, Louisiana, France, before heading back to what will soon become Haiti.

The very special Atomick family has very special traditions indeed. It is customary that young Lucas would be able to use the marvellous wish-granting Gloom Stone on his 13th birthday. However, his parents seem to think that he lacks maturity, and have denied him the privilege.

Lacks maturity? He who is as mature as an overripe banana. Whatever. All he needs to do is steal the stone to grant a few minor wishes, surreptitiously put it back, and his parents will be none the wiser.

After all, what could possibly go wrong?

Once upon a time in Japan lived a beautiful young woman. The beloved daughter of a silk mill owner, she was lavished with gorgeous kimonos. Her favourite was the one painted with mischievous black cats. The weaver professed his love to the maiden, but finding her indifferent to him, he found a way to separate one cat from the kimono! Thus, the cat begins a fantastic voyage, from Japan to the smokey markets of Victorian London, sometimes in the company of Sherlock Holmes himself, sometimes in the company of young Alice...
